

new world order

MODULNOVA BRINGS ITS INTEGRATED HOME SOLUTIONS TO MIAMI

Known in Italy since 1988 for its kitchen systems, Modulnova recently opened a showroom in Miami (at 3925 Federal Highway) thanks to the efforts of partners Carlos Bustinza, Brett Sugerman, Giselle Loor-Sugerman, and Veronica Bennett. The new location focuses on showcasing the brand's integrated solutions for the kitchen, bathroom, and other living areas in as experiential a way as possible. Upon arrival at the showroom, visitors are greeted with the brand's sleek Brera shelving system, a setup that juxtaposes substantial black shelves against Millitech graphite raw panels. "Modulnova truly brings the possibility to complete projects using all the material elements within its line, facilitating the design, installation, and end stages of projects," says Bennett. "By using a complete system of superior components and high-end finishes, one has the potential to think and efficiently explore their integration within a holistic concept." modulnovamiamistudio.com

ABOVE: The Blade Lab kitchen system by Modulnova juxtaposes raw Amarula stone with eucalyptus veneer.

In the MIX

For his latest collaboration with Roche Bobois, designer Christophe Delcourt was tasked with exploring the interplay of two iconic materials in the brand's history, walnut and travertine, and juxtaposing the raw structure of the wood with the imperfect beauty of the stone. Challenge accepted! The outcome of Delcourt's experiment can be seen in the new Palatine collection, which hits RB stores this spring. Roche Bobois describes the line as "Delcourt's love letter to Italy," for its celebration of the country's classic and contemporary architecture. Fans of the brand will have to decide for themselves. The grouping includes a table, a sideboard, and an armchair. roche-bobois.com

RIGHT: The Palatine collection's table (surrounded by other Roche Bobois lines) features a walnut top and a travertine two-pillar base.

ABOVE: Covered in wool-alpaca bouclé, the Palatine sofa is a comfortable and inviting piece. FAR LEFT: Designer Christophe Delcourt

PHOTOS COURTESY OF BRANDS